Having a problem with moles? The author believes that traditional methods of molecatching have not been bettered, and while new technology has inspired many to compete with the old ways, modern techniques have yet to offer an honest and respected means of getting rid of this common garden foe. Jeff Nicholls, a molecatcher with many years experience, outlines the best and most humane ways in which to catch moles, whether at home in the garden, on the farm or in the paddock. The book clearly discusses the options available to control the mole, and demonstrates how to go about catching moles.
