Languages and Compilers for Parallel Computing: 14th International Workshop, LCPC 2001, Cumberland Falls, KY, USA, August 1-3, 2001, Revised Papers (Lecture Notes in Computer Science)

This volume contains (revised versions) of papers presented at the 14th Workshop on Languages and Compilers for Parallel Computing. Parallel computing used to be nearly synonymous with supercomputing research, but as parallel processing technologies have become common features of commodity processors and systems, the focus of this workshop also has shifted. For example, this workshop marks the first time that compiler technology for power management has been recognized as a key aspect of parallel computing. Another pattern visible in the research presented is the continuing shift in emphasis from simply finding potential parallelism to being able to use parallelism efficiently enough to achieve good speedup. The scope of languages and compilers for parallel computing has thus grown to encompass all relevant aspects of systems, ranging from abstract models to runtime support environments. As in previous years, key researchers were invited to participate. Every paper submitted was reviewed in depth and quantitatively graded on originality, significance, correctness, presentation, relevance, need to revise the write-up, and overall how appropriate it would be to accept the paper. Any concerns raised were discussed by the program committee. In summary, the papers included here represent leading-edge work from North America, Europe, and Asia.
