Dustin Freimont expected to have two years to work his land in the Montana Territory and build a home worthy of his bride. By the time she was to arrive, he intended to have a snug house, thriving fields, and a fresh start for them both. But Delana Albright, fresh from family tragedy, shows up in Montana a year early. Far from the warm welcome she yearns for, she finds a disgruntled fiancé and single barn - the only structure for miles. As Dustin struggles to see Delana's surprise arrival as a blessing, he considers sending her away until he's better prepared for her. While each struggles to adapt to these unexpected circumstances, can God help them move beyond the challenges - and into each other's arms?
