Cybersecurity and Human Rights in the Age of Cyberveillance

Cybersecurity and Human Rights in the Age of Cyberveillance is a collection of articles by distinguished authors from the US and Europe and presents a contemporary perspectives on the limits online of human rights. By considering the latest political events and case law, including the NSA PRISM surveillance program controversy, the planned EU data protection amendments, and the latest European Court of Human Rights jurisprudence, it provides an analysis of the ongoing legal discourse on global cyberveillance.

Using examples from contemporary state practice, including content filtering and Internet shutdowns during the Arab Spring as well as the PRISM controversy, the authors identify limits of state and third party interference with individual human rights of Internet users. Analysis is based on existing human rights standards, as enshrined within international law including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, European Convention on Human Rights and recommendations from the Human Rights Council. The definition of human rights, perceived as freedoms and liberties guaranteed to every human being by international legal consensus will be presented based on the rich body on international law.

The book is designed to serve as a reference source for early 21st century information policies and on the future of Internet governance and will be useful to scholars in the information studies fields, including computer, information and library science. It is also aimed at scholars in the fields of international law, international relations, diplomacy studies and political science.

From reader reviews:

Leo Rizer:

In this 21st century, people become competitive in every single way. By being competitive at this point, people have to do something to make themselves survive, being in the middle of the crowded place and noticed by means of surrounding. One thing that sometimes many people have underestimated is the idea of reading. That's why, by reading an e-book, your ability to survive is boosted, then having a chance to endure that others do not have. For yourself, who wants to start reading a book, we give you this Cybersecurity and Human Rights in the Age of Cyberveillance book as a beginning and daily reading book. Why, because this book is greater than just a book.

Larry Brackett:

This book, titled Cybersecurity and Human Rights in the Age of Cyberveillance, is one of several books that are best sellers in this year. This is because when you read this book, you can get a lot of benefit from it. You will easily be able to buy that book in the book store or you can order it via online. The publisher of this book sells the e-book too. It makes it easier to read this book, because you can read this book on your cell phone. So there is no reason for you personally to pass this book up from your list.

Irma Patterson:

Are you a kind of stressful person, only having 10 or perhaps 15 minutes in your day to upgrade your mind, talent, or thinking skills, even analytical thinking? Then you are experiencing a problem with the book in comparison with what can satisfy your short time to read it, because all this time you only find a guide that needs more time to be studied. Cybersecurity and Human Rights in the Age of Cyberveillance can be your answer because it can be read by an individual who has those short free time problems.

Gerard Norman:

Is it you, actually, who has spare time after that spends it whole day by simply watching television programs or just lying down on the bed? Do you need something totally new? This Cybersecurity and Human Rights in the Age of Cyberveillance can be the response to, oh how comes? A fresh book you know. You are therefore out of date, spending your free time by reading in this new era is common, not a geek activity. So what do these textbooks have that the others don't?
